

Roundtable - The Global Future of Psychosomatic Medicine

The American Psychosomatic Society aims to play a key role in supporting the work of its members and in shaping the future of medicine. These roles can both be substantially enhanced by collaboration with the other organizations that share our interests and goals. In this special roundtable discussion, we will be joined by leaders from the European Academy of Psychosomatic Medicine and the International College of Psychosomatic Medicine. This special and unique opportunity will enable attendees to gain a global perspective on our field, to learn about what the members of these other organizations do, to identify how APS can uniquely contribute, and to help identify areas for international collaboration and action. Attendees will come away with a greater understanding of the field of psychosomatic medicine and the opportunities that exist for international collaboration, both as individuals and as organizations.
